Forecast for Sunday 20 Jun 2021

Weather: A rather cloudy start to the day with the chance of some light rain at times. A more definite area of rain will spread southeast during the morning affecting western ranges first. However, Caithness and Sutherland are likely to stay mainly dry with just patchy rain at times. Rain beginning to die out through the evening period.

Chance of cloud free mountain/hill tops above 800m: 30%, broken low cloud for most of the day, perhaps more scattered for northern hills like Ben Hope and Assynt. Skye too may see some breaks in the low cloud and it may be patchier on the Cuillins.

Visibility: Generally good visibility below any low cloud, perhaps moderate at times in rainfall. Low cloud will be broken from 500m, more scattered from 700m and above in the north.
